n this audio, we are going to talk to you about your natal Pluto complex.

When you have a Pluto complex, it just means that it alters the way in which you express your personality. It infuses it with the Pluto energy. The way we look at Pluto is that there's a deeper truth, your innermost truth that you're trying to uncover here in this lifetime.

Pluto has an intense energy and it represents powerful emotions, transformation, and rebirth. Because you have Pluto to this position, it often means you've had to contend with some pretty irrational, overwhelming experiences in life.

Or, if it hasn't been a literal circumstance, there is a fear, there is an anxiety that you are dealing with. It just feels like you're about to feel secure and safe and clear on where you're going and what your truth is - and irrationally, the rug gets pulled out from under you. And you have to start all over again.

The energy of Pluto is irrational. It's illogical. Anything that you're holding on too tightly to, that you give your power away to, Pluto will come in and it won't let you hold on to it too tightly. Pluto strips away everything that doesn't matter.

It's a process in life of continual transformation, which makes for a very rich, exciting, and profound life experience. You're going to have a spectrum of experiences that not everybody else will get to experience.

Pluto brings incredible wisdom. It's like you're here to really live life and get in the mess and the guts of it and roll around in it and experience it. It means you signed up to learn about power, but first it takes you on a journey of feeling very disempowered because it takes you out of you being able to control your life.

In that process, you become very strong, very powerful, and very wise. Because you're on a spiritual path where you are meant to face your greatest fears, to slay the dragons, and then to rise again.

And this is what we're going to talk to you about in the following audio.

Your natal chart is essentially a screenshot of exactly where the planets were at the time of your birth. When you were born, the planet Pluto was in dynamic aspect to a core part of your chart.

The core part of your chart is just comprised of your Moon, your Venus, your Mars, your Ascendant. These planets essentially make up your personality traits and these energies, these archetypes, that are very animated and alive within you.

Because you have Pluto to this position, it just means that it alters the way in which you express your personality. It infuses it with the Pluto energy.

When you have a Pluto complex, it often means you've had to contend with some pretty irrational, overwhelming experiences in life.

Or if it hasn't been a literal circumstance, there is a fear, there is an anxiety that you are dealing with. It just feels like you're about to feel secure and safe and clear on where you're going and what your path is and what your truth is - and irrationally, the rug gets pulled out from under you. And you have to start all over again.

Everything you believed, what you thought was the truth, is completely dissolved. The energy of Pluto is irrational. It's illogical. It's trying to break down your control program of the way you think life should be.

In that process, it's trying to get you to let go. It's taking you to greater depths. But because you're in the depths, it means you're out of your control or you're forced at times in your life to deal with very overwhelming situations that you can't necessarily ignore, or power through, or rationalize.

Pluto is going to bring chaos into your life. It's just a part of the pattern, but how do you handle it when it comes to you? How do you co create with it? Pluto's going to make you feel things. It's just that there are different ways that you may respond to that.

At The Pattern, we look at this as a gift. Of course, it comes with baggage and all kinds of things that we're going to dive into.

Everybody and every part of their chart and everyone's unique journey is their contribution here. There is no better or worse chart. Often that gets asked a lot, is this a good chart? We're all so attached to everything being good - and what does good even mean?

There are some people who do not have Pluto complexes or things that could be perceived as challenges. Does that make it better? Because we would suggest that by having this complex, it actually makes your journey that much more rich and powerful.

It's about having a human experience and that is comprised of both the light and the dark, both the joy and the pain. So, when we talk to you about this complex, take a deep breath.

We are in no way making any kind of judgment about it or trying to suggest that your life has been filled with hardship and challenges and pain. We're just trying to talk about this energy that exists in your life, and it's very much about applying it to your personal journey, because there's a spectrum of ways people can experience this energy.

It can manifest as anxiety and depression, or your feelings can be so intense and deep and heavy that you fear what would happen if you express them. But underneath, however this is playing out in your journey, it's the same energy that exists. It's just manifesting in different ways.

One response is going to be this feeling that you're trapped, and that you have to hide away. This is a really intense world, and you want to survive.

Very early on you might have gotten a message that you need to hide your sensitivity and that somehow it's a weakness as opposed to a strength, and that it's dangerous to be vulnerable. And you shut your heart off and you do not let anyone in.

But if you've gone to that extreme, it's important to become aware, because it means that you're really shutting off your life experience.

The idea would be starting to come to terms with whatever has happened in your childhood or in your general life experience that has shut it down or what these fears are based on - what has happened that has made you so terrified of being vulnerable.

Sharing your heart - have you done it in the past and somebody has rejected you or made you feel shame? Whatever it is, it's an important thing to recognize because possibly you're afraid to trust yourself, and trust your direction in life, and be fearless about where you want to go.

Whereas the other response to Pluto is to rage against this powerlessness you feel inside. In that case you could express yourself in a way that's wild and out of control.

Some people invite it into their life, and they don't see it as a problem at all. Other people have gone through some pretty traumatic things.

You might not be on either ends of these extremes, you might fall somewhere in the middle. But through the course of your life, because of Pluto, it forces you to surrender.

You're going to be forced to learn how to be present in this life, and feel what you feel, to let go, to allow yourself to be vulnerable, so that you can get to a deeper place, and a deeper knowing, on a soul level.

It's going to break your heart open, so all the emotions come out, and you're forced to go into territory that you otherwise would never sign up for. It's taking you into the depths, the deepest territory possible, and it's the dark night of the soul.

It doesn't mean your whole life is this process, but it means that you have experiences in your life so that you can learn about this. Even just by becoming aware, it transforms it, and then you're able to start this journey of surrender and rise from the ashes and find true empowerment.

The older you get, the less overwhelming it is. Because as you grow, you learn and you become wise. And ideally, at a certain point, you've incorporated and metabolized this wisdom and it almost becomes medicine for you.

You're no longer overwhelmed by the chaos because you're so sturdy in this deep place. And that is the gift of Pluto.

There are all kinds of energies and complexes and situations that we deal with and that we see when we look at somebody's natal chart. Going back to good and bad, some would look at a natal chart with Pluto and think, "Oh, that's going to mean all kinds of challenges."

We don't really approach it that way. Because with this complex, the intention is for you to feel truly empowered in your life. That's the point, but often we're sort of tricked or fooled into believing power lies outside of ourselves, that it's external, that it's in what we create in the world and how we're perceived.

In fact, it has nothing to do with that. It's a much deeper thing. The intention of it being in your life is ultimately to surrender to what we cannot control, and through that experience, that limitation of the ego truth, and that understanding we're not in control, a deeper truth reveals itself.

That is true empowerment.

This energy within you, you have to apply it to your own journey. Because some people surrender very early in life, and they're living in their truth, and they do feel very empowered by this energy, and for others, it's a lifetime of fighting against it, and feeling overwhelmed by it.

When you listen, try and apply it to your personal experience and how it might resonate. We'd say in all circumstances and situations, if you have this complex, there's an intention.

By bringing to light what this energy, is ideally you can relate it to how it's impacted your journey. So that if in the event at times it seemed like life is very beyond your control and overwhelming, you'll now have a better understanding as to why that was happening and you can work with it where it becomes very empowering.

That's really the intention here. It's not to bring anyone down or drag you. This is an app about going deeper.

If you're in that moment of wanting to go deeper and wanting to understand it, then ideally this is supportive. Because we'd say with Pluto in your natal chart, it means you've signed up for an experience of depth.

Oftentimes, that depth comes through painful experiences, because the things that happen are not what we want to happen - according to our ego and our comparison to other people in the world. But they are very important for a deeper kind of soul growth that ultimately leaves you with some pretty powerful wisdom and perspective.

It will be a process of life of just stripping away the layers. It's like you've put together the perfect idea of who you are that makes you feel in control - and Pluto, throughout your life, is just going to strip one layer away.

Then you think you have control again, you've reorganized yourself, and then Pluto comes in again, and it strips away another level.

It's this process of life of stripping away what doesn't matter until you really liberate and free yourself. Because eventually there's nothing that's hidden. It strips away all of that excess so you're laid bare, so that you can be in real truth.

In a broader sense, Pluto is an energy that reveals to you how you deal with the cycles of life and death while you're alive. It doesn't have to mean literal death.

In our culture, we're often so afraid of death, so afraid of the unknown, and we think of it as this external thing, this ending of life, when in fact it's part of it.

If you look at Buddhism and the bardo state and you look at the Bible, we talk about going to heaven. Or you talk about Greek mythology and crossing the river Styx and Elysium fields.

All of this imagery is about going to a place. And in human design, they talk about that too, that death is a place, it's not a time.

If we can start to understand that, that it is a place within us, it is the dark within us, that if we can inhabit, just like we inhabit a life of spring and summer and fall and winter, the light and the dark - life and death are all a part of the same cycle. Dark informs light, and light informs dark.

Essentially this process of life and death is essential to our experience here. We often try to disconnect from it, we pretend it doesn't exist, and so Pluto is really about how you relate to this process.

That probably seems very heavy. If you haven't turned it off and you've made it this far, amazing -just some light concepts about existential longing and death. But again, these don't have to be that heavy.

Once we face them, then we can look at them with different eyes. Yeah, these are heavy, and we all want to avoid them. But if you're listening to this audio, then you likely do want to know a little bit of something about it.

In our culture, we are constantly distracting ourselves from the inevitability that everybody will someday pass away.

That can often be why we're driven to accomplish so much here on this plane. We want to leave a mark. We want to live on eternally. We don't want to think it was for nothing, that we're striving to accomplish something here so that we know we were here, so that it lives on beyond us.

That could be a certain kind of ambition and wanting to succeed here, to wanting to have a family and children, so that there's this part of you that lives on forever.

There's this quote by Arthur Miller about how we're all trying to carve our names on a block of ice on a summer day. That we're all trying to make this indelible mark in our life so that we know we were here, even though we know inevitably that ice will melt and we will pass on.

It is something we compartmentalize and we spend a lot of time avoiding it. We immerse ourselves so much in the day to day, the material, the mundane, how we look, how successful we are. To disconnect from this deeper existential truth in social media or watching things online or entertainment.

We think of death as a separate thing, as opposed to part of life, that something deeper within you, soul or an energy, continues on.

When you look at nature, you can see that so clearly. As things die in the forest, they are integrated with Earth, and then something new blossoms, something new rises again.

There's regeneration and there's new growth. And we are a part of nature. We are a part of this planet and this universe. And we follow the same pattern.

If you relate Pluto to that, it is the underground. It is what is hidden. What we can't see is unknown, and that often makes it frightening, and it's something we don't want to think about.

We don't want to go deeper, and we don't want to go into the subconscious. If you can relate it to that, it's the shadow. It's the thing that we're hiding from ourselves.

It's the stuff we're most afraid of, and we want to push away, just like death. We want it to be far away, and it doesn't exist, but in fact, there is so much wealth there.

In Greek mythology, the god of the underworld, Pluto, is the Latin form of the Greek name, Pluton. Meaning wealth giver. Because there is nourishment in the earth, in the dark soil, in the depths, in the subconscious. There is so much richness.

Dark informs light, and light informs dark. It's about how do you balance that? How do we bring that more into our life, so that we don't have to be so afraid?

How you choose to deal with this energy within you is your destiny. And the purpose of this audio is to help you do that better.
